

Q: Are there bigger crowds during the festivals?

Contributed by Questions Answers
Monday, 12 May 2008

Q: Angie asks, "We will be in the area around the end of the Bluegrass Festival. We have the option to visit during the last days of that or the beginning of the next week between that festival & the next one. Are the crowds much less or the same between festivals? Thanks!"

A: If you are looking to avoid crowds then I would suggest visiting during the non-festival time-frame. The crowds do tend to be a little smaller when there is not a festival going on. However, you would miss out on some of the great shows and activities that are offered during the festival. Check out the Bluegrass & BBQ Festival Page to review a summary of the events and make sure you won't mind missing out on the activities planned for the festival dates.